Why are my books so short?

Hi Friend

I am Aubrey E. Drummond, the writer of this newsletter, and I must say it kind of feels weird reintroducing myself each time I start one of these. But I understand that some of you may be reading my words of lunacy for the first time, (I feel for you) so therefore my introduction, TA DAAA! Thank you, thank you, (I bow my head) good to see that one day of acting lessons did come in handy.

Okay, back to---, or why don't I say let's get started on the main topic of this newsletter. Why are my books' page count so small. Noticed I didn't use short there. Just wanted to dispense with any and all short jokes right off the bat. Alright I promise I will stay on topic even if I have to stub my own toe. Ouch!

There is a purpose to my madness, believe it or not. To why I write short poetry books, and yes, I emphasized poetry, because I feel people are not going to sit around reading a long poetry book. Heck, most people barely read anyway, and I'm not going to gain their attention by slapping a one hundred and fifty to two-hundred-page poetry book on them. Now, please don't think I'm insulting you. You bought my books, read my poetry, signed up for my newsletters, obviously, you all like my poetry and would probably buy larger books of my poetry if I wrote them.

I'm talking about the average joe out there, people who I would like to attract to the art of reading poetry. People who I would love to get to read my poetry and to realize that they may even like it and maybe perhaps want to read more of it. Wouldn't it be lovely if I could get everyone to like poetry, Oh wouldn't it, just wouldn't it be lovably. (okay, enough with the 'My Fair Lady' stuff), still love you, Audrey. (that's Hepburn by the way, Female version of my name.)

Question: Would you like me to write longer books? Feel free to drop me a line, Yes or No, either way.

I am currently enjoying reading 'Clouds on the Ground' by Autumn Williams. I'm recommending this book to those who would like to see life (literally) from a different perspective. Let me know who you like reading and why, drop me a line.

As you may know from last month, I mention that I'm working on my fifth book of poetry called 'Hello Stranger'. Hopefully it will be ready for publication in April. I recently got a peek at the cover art and believe me, it looks great, perhaps next month the book will be farther along and I will be able to share the cover with you.

Last month I also told you about my 'Inside the Circle of the Sun' series. If you haven't noticed, I've gathered my previous books together into this series, available on Amazon.

Also, there will be a final free book promo for my latest book 'Blackbird' on March 8th on Amazon, if you haven't picked up a copy of it, now would be your last chance to get it free!

I will have Free Book promos for, 'Boy, Kant you Read' (my first written book of poetry) on March 9th through March 13th on Amazon, and 'Eating Round the Toilet Stool'. (my second written book of poetry) on March 14th through March 18th on Amazon. Don't miss the opportunity to pick up your free copies.

If you read my last newsletter, you know I was giving away a free book to those who joined my newsletter. If you haven't received 'Nothing', your free book,(I still can't resist),please use the link below.

That's it folks, and as always,

Thank you
